The Art of Writing Daily Paper Pieces

"America," says a theatrical magazine quip, "was better off when we had more whittlers and fewer chislers."

It's a good paragraph.

It caught my eye because it reminded me of a home-spun wise-crack of long ago. In 1924 I was running a column called The Derrick for the El Dorado Daily News, and vacation time came around. A linotype operator, Brown Turner, had been flitting with the idea of switching to the editorial office, and several of his trial pieces looked good. So I turned the column over to him while I was gone.

"The trouble with America is the garage is where the smoke-house ought to be."

Turner had the trenchant style of a man who observed life first and got his book-learning afterward. The problem that bothers every young journalist just out of school—Booth Tarkington called it "the problem of getting the ink out of writing"—didn't bother Turner. He told me he never got beyond the fourth or fifth grade of school. But he knew spelling, syntax, and facts—and he read every book in my Harvard Classics... you know, the set that takes up five feet in a bookcase.

Later Brown went on the telegraph desk at El Dorado, editing national news and writing headlines. He quit in order to try his hand at publishing the old Washington Telegraph, at Washington, this county, which was about 1926. From there he went to the Nashville (Tenn.) Tennessean and became a well-known feature writer, including some pieces for the magazines.

After a spell on Florida papers Brown Turner wound up on the copy desk of the Kansas City Star, where he now is.

Odd, isn't it—an Arkansas lad who never finished the grammar grades holds a responsible editorial position on one of the most exacting newspapers in the world?

But the head-man himself on the Kansas City Star never went to college, nor did his predecessor, nor did the third guy before either of them, the paper's founder, William Rockhill Nelson.

In fact, one of the 10 richest and most influential newspapers in America has never had a college man at its head.

It doesn't necessarily prove there's anything wrong with higher education. But I'll tell you what it does prove—

It proves that the newspaper business is one of the most democratic processes in all democratic America.

GOPs to Name State Ticket Until Aug. 15

Little Rock, June 7.—Arkansas Republicans won't name their candidates for the state general election until Aug. 15.

The state convention—which customarily names the candidates—yesterday conferred that authority on the smaller state committee.

The committee's meeting date of Aug. 15 is after the second Democratic primary.

There was no statement as to why that particular date was chosen. But some observers speculated that identity of the Democratic nominee for governor might be in a factor the Republicans wanted to consider in naming their candidate.

Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota and unsuccessful candidate for the 1948 Republican presidential nomination, in the main convention speech invited southerners who have "become dissatisfied with the Truman administration" to join the Republican party.

Stunt Flyer Featured in Air Show

T. Hennessey Collins, a Kentuckian who says he is from Bourbon, in Corn County, is a stunt flyer of renowned who will appear in the American Legion Air Show at Municipal Airport Sunday, June 11, at 3 p.m.

His stunts are spectacular and will scare, thrill and amaze the audience. He does one-wheel take-offs and landings, side and backward flying.

The crowd will grasp when he pulls the stick straight back and his tiny monoplane shoots straight up—somehow he always manages to come out of it safely.

Many, many other stunts are in store for visitors at the Legion Airshow here Sunday.

Laney Rejects GOP Coalition Feelers

Little Rock, June 7.—(UP)—Ben T. Laney, Arkansas gubernatorial candidate and chairman of the national States Rights Democratic committee, today rejected the coalition feelers put out by the Republican party.

Even if he were defeated in his race against Gov. Sid McMath in the regular Democratic primaries, Laney said, he would not join forces with the Republicans in a bid to win the general election in November.

Laney, a former governor of Arkansas, timed his statement with the close of the annual state Republican convention here at which former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen and other GOP spokesmen made it clear that they wanted the support of "dissatisfied South Democrats."

Laney's rejection of the olive branch also was seen as a reply to McMath's charges that he has received Republican financial support in his gubernatorial campaign.

"I will lend no assistance to any movement that could be interpreted as forming any coalition nor will I support any independent or Republican candidate against the nominee of the Democratic party," Laney said.

Many Southern Democrats believe in the principles of "home rule and constitutional administration."

These are things we also believe in and they should come and vote with us," the 1948 Republican presidential aspirant said.

The GOP state convention platform also contained a statement that a "united effort of Republicans and a strong portion of Democrats" was needed to unseat President Truman's administration.

Third Shelton Brother Shot to Death

Fairfield, Ill., June 7.—(P)—An unseen gunman today killed a third of the five Shelton brothers, whose family gang has been an Illinois scourge for decades.

Roy Shelton, about 59, was shot twice, then run over by the hard-horned and disk rig with which he had been cultivating his P.O. Creek bottom farm 12 miles southwest of Fairfield.

A farm hand, Frank McKibben, about 49, who was driving a second tractor about 100 feet away, was shot at twice when he went to Shelton's aid. McKibben was not hit.

Bullets struck Roy in the back and groin. He toppled from the tractor seat and his body was badly mutilated by the harrow and disks which passed over him.

For decades, three of the Shelton brothers had been central figures in gang warfare in southern Illinois. The notorious three were Carl and Bernie, now dead of ambush wounds, and big Earl who has twice recovered from such attacks.

The slaying of Roy was a surprise to Fairfield residents who said that he and Datta 50, of Cisse, 14 miles to the northwest, had not been active in the Shelton gang. Both men have stuck closely to their farming.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, June 7.—(AP)—A fresh flow of buying orders steamed into the stock exchange today after the market showed a monetary touch of weakness. Some stocks touched at the highest prices since 1929.

Steels, motors, radio-television and selected rails paced the rise with gains running to around four points. Elsewhere advances were confined to mainly to a point or less.

Anti-Fascist Group Must Go to Jail

Washington, June 7.—(P)—Chairman Edward K. Barsky and 10 other leaders of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee committee were ordered to jail today to serve sentences for contempt of Congress.

They protested they are victims of an American effort to bolster Fascist Spain as part of the cold war.

All 11, including novelist Howard Fast, were convicted of contempt in refusing to produce records and reports of the organization for the house un-American activities committee.

Barsky will serve six months in jail and the others—all directors of the anti-Fascist group will serve three months. All must pay $500 fines. All 11 are from New York City. They were given time to make some telephone calls and say goodbye to their families before going to the District of Columbia jail.

Their attorney, O. John Rogge, said it probably won't be known until Tuesday where they will serve out their terms.

In advance of their court appearance before Federal Judge Richard B. Keach, the defendants held a news conference and put out a statement saying that:

"The meaning of our imprisonment can be found only in the U. S. attempt, for purposes of war, to shore up the tottering structure of fascism in Spain."

The statement said that all the defendants "were victims of the cold war program."

The joint anti-Fascist Refugee committee claims its main interest is in aiding Republican Spanish refugees. The house committee and the justice department have called it subversive and a communist front group.

Lie Insists UN Must Deal With China

Lake Success, June 7.—(P)—U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie carried his demand for settlement of the Chinese representation dispute and ending the cold war to all members of the United Nations today.

He told them, in effect, that unless Red China is seated in the U.N. and the Russians come back to United Nations meetings, there can be no progress toward world peace.

By letter and by radio messages in 22 languages, the U. N. chief executive appealed for support of a 10-point peace plan he has already presented in person to President Truman, and to Russia's Prime Minister Josef Stalin during his stay in Moscow.

Lie also plugged his plan when he saw British and French leaders during his European trip.

He said in his letter that he could not tell U.N. members what his confidential talks revealed but that all four nations left him confident they still rely on the U.N. for negotiation on world problems. His letter and memorandum also outlined concretely for the first time his 10 proposals for a 20-year peace program.

Lie said he is going to push his proposals before the 11-nation security council "at the appropriate time" and also may take them into the full 59-nation assembly that meets here Sept. 19. He has said in previous statements that if the Chinese question is not settled by then, the assembly would meet in confusion.

Lie is on record with a memorandum stating that a government in control of the people and territory of a country should be its representative in the U.N.

State Seeks Bonds in Lieu of Prisoners

Little Rock, June 7.—(P)—The state of Arkansas is seeking $30,000 posted for two men who were supposed to show up at the penitentiary but didn't.

The bonds were executed for Martin Lane and Harry Smith of Chicago, who were ordered to the state prison farm last week to begin serving 22-year sentences for burglary and grand larceny. The two, convicted in Mississippi county, didn't appear and haven't been located.

The attorney general's office yesterday asked the Supreme court to forfeit the bonds—$15,000 for each man—posted by the Continental Casualty company of Chicago. The bonds enabled the men to remain at liberty while an appeal was pending from sentence of the Mississippi Circuit court. The Arkansas Supreme court affirmed the judgments, and the U. S. Supreme court refused to review the case.

California Democrats Name Roosevelt, Warren Is GOP Choice; S. D. Ousts Gurney

By The Associated Press

James Roosevelt's claim of Democratic nomination for governor of California, Gov. Earl Warren's long lead for renomination by the state's Republicans, and the refusal of South Dakota Republicans to re-nominate Senator Gurney stood out today in still-contingent primary returns.

In place of Gurney, top Republican on the senate armed forces committee, the South Dakota voters yesterday nominated Rep. Francis Case. Case campaigned on the need for a balanced federal budget, even at the cost of trimming military and foreign aid appropriations. He'll be opposed in November by Democratic candidate John Engel.

The primaries in California yesterday posed the interesting question of whether Gov. Warren could win against the son of Franklin D. Roosevelt—win the Democratic as well as the Republican nomination for a third term. (California laws permit a candidate to file in the opposing party's primary as well as his own, and in 1946 Warren was the choice of both the Democrats and Republicans.)

When less than one-tenth of the California precincts had reported, Roosevelt issued a statement at Los Angeles saying, "I am indeed indebted to those who have nominated me." At that time the count was: Roosevelt 54,961, Warren 41,704.

At about the same time in the Republican primary, the count there was Warren 25,951 to 3,571.

As the slow counting progressed—there was a long ballot in California—later returns snowed:

Republican primary, 18,185 of precincts Warren 204,025, Roosevelt 23,609.

Democratic primary (5,075 of precincts) Warren 157,701, Roosevelt 176,430.

Warren, who was the Republican vice presidential nominee in 1948, campaigned on his record as governor for two terms. Roosevelt attacked the record as one of major failures.

New dealing Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas, former actress, pulled ahead in the race for the senate Democratic in California. Behind her in this race were Manchester Boddy, Democratic publisher, and Rep. Richard Nixon, Republican who was assured of his own party's nomination.

Arkansas' Frank Pace, Jr. Bluntly Tells Cadets That Russian Tanks Are Superior

By HAL BOYLE

New York.—(P)—Are the Russians gabling on limitless numbers of superior tanks as their chief ace in the hole if war comes?

That would seem to be the guess of high American defense officials. The United States, which never in the second world war produced a tank which could slug on equal terms with German armor, apparently has decided it now won't compete in this field with Russian tanks—which were as good as, or better than, the German.

Fourteen years after Adolf Hitler marched into the Rhineland, America now has a tank certainly the equal of those Hitler relied on in 1938. But we still don't have one as good as the Russian have now.

This was admitted by the new secretary of the army, Frank Pace, Jr., a 37-year-old attorney and veteran of the air forces transport command, in a speech yesterday to the graduating class of the U. S. Military academy at West Point.

It was a pretty blunt address that pulled back the Iron Curtain a bit on what is going on in the cold war.

Pace assured the young West Pointers they had the opportunity of going into the best air force, "without qualification, in the world today."

Then he said to the majority, who don't intend to go into the air force:

"I suspect from certain remarks I have heard lately that there are some in this country who consider the army to be a less technical, less scientific service than the navy and air force. Nothing could be further from the truth."

The secretary went on to point out how important scientific research was to the army, and added:

"Our army, as I hardly need remind you, not only is outnumbered

Sod Planting Also to Be Demonstrated

Riley Lewallen, chairman of the board of supervisors of the Terre Rouge Bodcaw Soil Conservation District has made arrangements for a sod planting demonstration to be held in conjunction with the tree planting demonstration on Friday afternoon June 9 at 3 o'clock, as has been previously announced by the chamber of commerce.

The sod planter which is owned by the district is a two row self operating machine needing only power to pull it and someone to put the bermuda roots into the hopper. Quoting Mr. Lewallen, "Best results in distribution of the sod into three or four inch lengths. The sod should be prepared in advance of the planting or discing, and be fairly free from weeds or other foulness. All interested farmers are urged to come out and see this planter in operation."

W. M. Dillard, Saratoga, has just completed sodding thirty acres with this machine. Mr. Dillard has shown this faith in the future of Grass-farming by putting some of his best cotton land in bermuda grass.

Bermuda grass is one of the best perennial pasture grasses we have in this section of Arkansas, according to John Keck, in charge of the local soil conservation service office. Its ability to hold soil in place and resist erosion makes it an outstanding soil saver. With proper fertilization it makes a large volume of palatable forage for livestock. Bermuda will afford some grazing during dry periods when other grasses fail. It is adapted to a wide range of soil types and conditions. Bermuda grass is comparable with many other grasses and legumes and does well in combination with them. Along with fescue, reseeded crimson clover, singletary peas, for winter grazing, ladino clover, hop clover, annual lespedeza, for spring and early summer grazing, Serecia lespedeza, kudzu, and sweet sudan grass for summer supplemental pastures, bermuda grass has a major place in the year-around pasture program in Hempstead county.

Washington, June 7.—(P)—Rep. Doughton (D-N.C.) set a July 1 get today for the house to vote on veto-threatened $1,100,000,000 excise tax slashing bill into the of the senate.

But the outlook for any tax bill at all this year is dreary.

Doughton's tax-framing has stayed and he is a committed way to his final approval yesterday on excise cuts estimated at almost double the $650,000,000 President Truman proposed.

Council Passes Parking Meter Ordinance

The Hope City Council suspended last night and passed an ordinance regulating installation of parking meters inside the city and calling for a citywide election on the issue, dates to be selected by the council.

The rules were suspended and the ordinance passed probably due to the fact that nobody appeared to argue for or against the issue.

Another ordinance was passed setting up street improvement district No. 17, Beverly Hills Addition, and a dissolution of Street Improvement Dist. 8 and C. B. and G. D. Dist. No. 5, was filed with the clerk and no vote ordered.

A petition was filed calling for formation of street improvement district 18 in the southeast section of the city. A notice was ordered published.

Another petition calling for paving of West 16th street from L & A Tracks to the Spring Hill road was presented. The issue was referred to the street department.

The group ordered the Park Committee to do away with the present caretakers' quarters and make other arrangements.

The new well was accepted from contractor subject to approval of the state health department.

The council relieved a check of $5 from the Third District stock Show Association for a year lease on Fair park property.

Extension of an electrical line off Highway 29 to take care of E. and S. C. Huckabee was approved. Electrical territory in Union Chapel Area was voted to R. E. A. Another line extended northwest of Mrs. E. S. Jones was approved.

A claim by Mrs. Mary E. asking compensation for a burn arm which she alleged suffered due to high grass growing over a board walk at the end of Main street failed for lack of evidence.

For 54 Years U. S. Courts Have Been Chipping at Law That Allowed Segregation

Editor's note: This is the latest of several stories on the Supreme court's decisions on Negroes and racial segregation.

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 7. — Fifty years ago the Supreme court ruled, in effect, that segregation of Negroes by state law is all right so long as they get equal treatment with whites.

"It didn't seem unreasonable," the court said. And since then no Supreme court—including the present one—has tried to wipe out that ruling, at least in one strike.

In recent years the court has certainly been chipping away at it, chipping down segregation and chipping matters a little here, a little there, in such different fields as education, travel, voting, and buying property.

In fact in the field of civil rights for Negroes the court has gone a little further than Congress. This court will try to give the backbone to what has happened before the civil war, when there was still slavery, the most important Supreme court decision on Negroes was given in 1857 in the case of Dred Scott, a Negro slave.

The owner had taken him from the slave state of Missouri into the free state of Illinois, where slavery was forbidden, and then later back to Missouri, where slavery was still legal. The court ruled that his stay in the free state did not make him free. So he remained a slave.

The court gave a historic decision that Negroes were property, not citizens of the U. S. and couldn't be citizens even if they were freed. Therefore, not being citizens, a Negro had no rights which the U. S. was bound to protect, including the right to sue in federal court.

From the war came. All slaves were freed. And in 1868 the 14th amendment to the constitution was adopted, completely wiping out the ruling of the Supreme court in the Dred Scott decision.

The amendment said all persons born or naturalized in the U. S. are citizens and no state can pass a law abridging the privileges of a citizen or deprive him of equal protection of the laws.

(This 14th amendment has a key in all the big, subsequent decisions by the court on Negroes, particularly the part which guarantees him equal protection of the laws.)

But slowly after this the southern states, full of former slaves, began passing laws to segregate Negroes from whites. In 1890 Louisiana passed a law saying Negroes must be kept separate on trains.

Did that violate the 14th amendment? The court had to face it in 1896. It ruled that such a segregation law was not unconstitutional.

The court's opinion said: "We think the enforced separation of the races, as applied to the internal commerce of the state, neither abridges the immunities of the colored man, nor denies him the equal protection of the laws, within the meaning of the 14th amendment."

"We cannot say that a law which authorizes or even requires the separation of the two races in public conveyances is unreasonable."

That was the majority opinion. But one member of the court, Justice Harlan, disagreed very sharply and said in his dissenting opinion: "Our constitution is color blind and neither knows nor tolerates classes among citizens. In my opinion the judgment rendered this day will, in time, prove to be quite as pernicious as the decision made by this tribunal in the Dred Scott case."

But no court since 1896 has tackled the whole wide program of segregation head-on. Meaning: No Supreme court since that day has ruled that segregation—that is, any kind of segregation by law—is wrong or unconstitutional.

But instead, the courts have tackled the problem from different angles, chipping away at the idea of segregation, narrowing down the power of states to segregate.

This is an important point to remember in trying to understand

SW Bell Has New Contract With Workers

St. Louis, June 7. — (P)—Terms of a new one-year contract for some 5,000 employees of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company were announced today.

The contract provides adjustments that will give workers in some cities a wage increase. It does not call for a general wage hike.

Commenting on the agreement, the utility said its multi-million-dollar improvement program probably will be halted unless telephone rates are increased.

Terms of the contract were disclosed by southwestern division 20 of the Communications Workers after it was approved by the international union. The agreement went into effect Sunday.

"The major improvements were obtained through reduction in length of schedules and through reclassification of certain cities," the union said. "The wage increase through these adjustments will range from 50 cents to $10.50 per week. The largest increases will be found in those towns classified."

Mid-Summer in East But Cool in Northwest

Chicago, June 7. — (P)— It was mid-summer weather for the eastern and southern part of the country today but it was cool in the Pacific northwest.

Temperatures headed for the 80's and 90's over most of the warm belt again today, duplicating yesterday's readings. The mercury soared above the 100 mark in the plains states for the first time this year. The record included 102 at Pierre, S. D., 99 at Fargo, N. D., and 97 at Rapid City, S. D.

Snow fell over the higher elevations of northern California and Oregon. One inch was reported at Lake View, Ore. Showers were reported over the Pacific northwest and southward into Nevada.

Other wet spots included the central Gulf region and locally in the northern plains. New Orleans reported more than four inches of rain in the last 24 hours.

Treatment Important to Mental Cases

Fayetteville, June 7. — (P)—First findings of a mental health survey being conducted by the University of Arkansas' Institute of Science and Technology were announced today.

The general conclusions were that earlier treatment of mental cases might have resulted in hundreds of cures not now possible and follow-up care after release of patients from the state hospital probably would have prevented hundreds of readmissions.

While the survey is statewide, a "guinea pig" survey of Washington county was completed first and used as the basis of these conclusions.

The Washington county survey included 501 mental cases admitted to the state hospital since 1950.

Dr. J. W. Coddington, director of the survey said: "The simple fact of our early findings indicates clearly that if the state had a good program for finding these persons and getting them into the hospital earlier, it would have fewer to treat in the long run."

"We found that those admitted during the first year of their illness had a much better recovery rate, shorter hospitalization and fewer readmissions."

He added that the survey also showed that many readmissions brought on by the return of released patients to the same environment which sent them to the hospital originally and by the lack of care after release.

Other facts learned about Washington county's patients at the state hospital:

Thirty-two per cent of them died in the hospital;

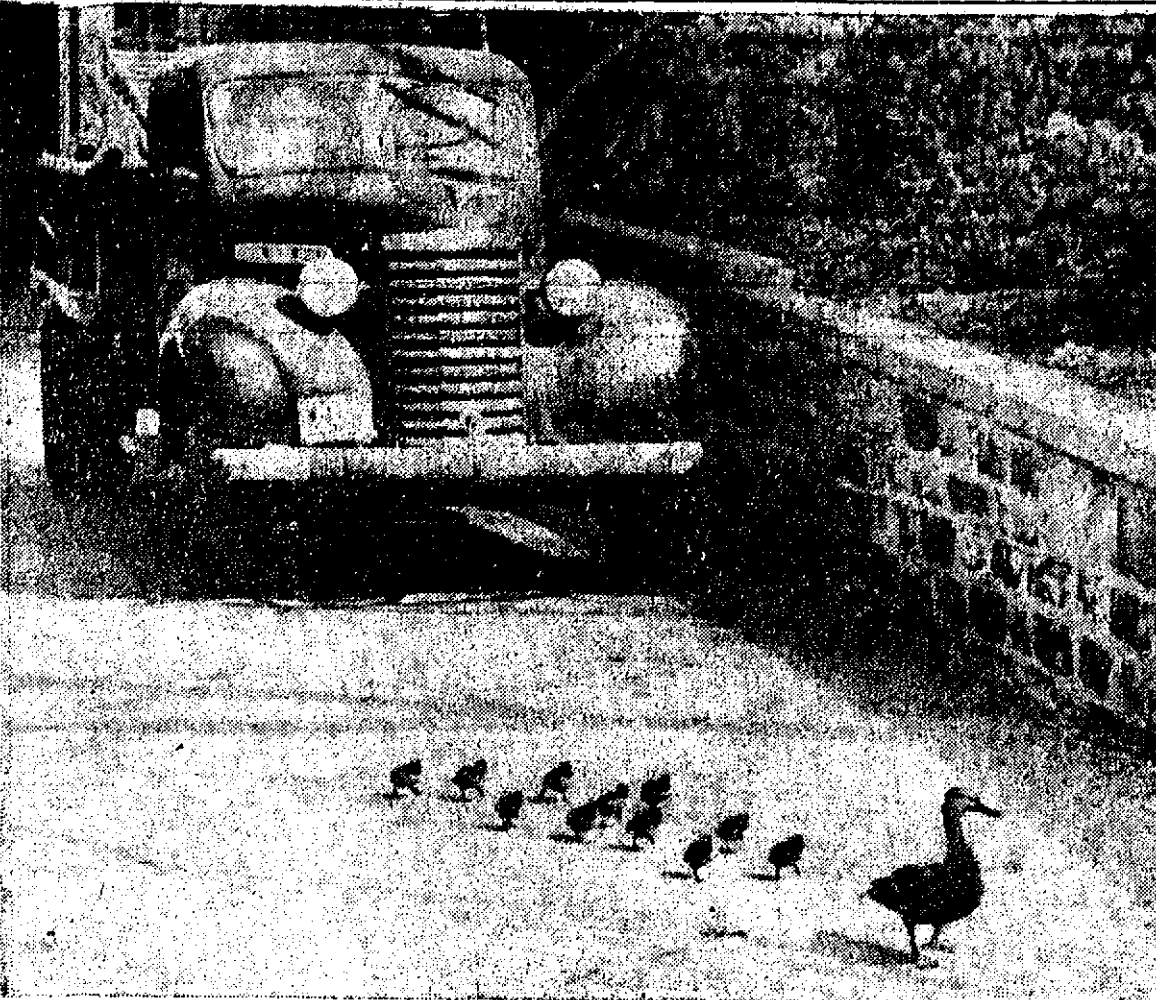

Thirteen per cent died after their release;

Eighteen per cent still are in the hospital.

That leaves 37 per cent who were released and are living.

Of those released, one-third achieved better personalities and adjustments than before; one-third still possess symptoms of disturbance but not so severe, and four out of ten now are hospitalized under readmission.

Gentle-Looking French Woman Slayer of 12

Paris, June 7. — (P)—Mme. Marie Besnard looks like a kindly grandmother and claims a "gentle character," but French police say she is responsible for the arsenic deaths of 12 of her close relatives.

After nearly three months of mental tests, doctors yesterday ruled the 54-year-old French peasant woman was sane and must face trial for murder.

Mme. Besnard is accused of poisoning her parents, two husbands, the parents of her second husband and six other persons—all since 1927. Conviction could mean death on the guillotine.

During the sanity tests Mme. Besnard told the doctors: "I have a gentle character. I go to mass every Sunday and I take communion at Easter and on All Saints' day."

Raleigh, N. C., June 7. — Willis Smith today announced that he will enter a June 24 runoff primary against Senator Frank Graham for North Carolina's Democratic senatorial nomination. Graham led Smith by 53,000 votes in the May 27 primary, but lacked a clear majority by 5,600 votes.

Last Prisoner in Scottsboro Case Given Parole

Montgomery, Ala., June 7. — (P)—The Alabama pardon and parole board has ordered the release of Andy Wright, the last of the defendants of the famed "Scottsboro case" remaining in prison.

At a brief hearing yesterday, Wright said he hoped to lead a law-abiding life. "I believe I can make a go of it," he told the board.

When he leaves Kilby prison here Friday, he will head for an undisclosed city in New York where he will work as a porter in a hospital.

Once before, in 1944, the 33-year-old Negro was paroled, but was returned to prison three years later after he was convicted of reckless

All or None Is Ruling of NLRB

Washington, June 7. — (P)— The national labor relations board said today a CIO union couldn't represent employees of one unit of the Lion Oil company's Shuler (Ark.) field without representing all the field's workers.

The board said the Oil Workers International union sought to represent production and maintenance employees in what the union described as a "gasoline plant" operation by Lion in the Shuler field, which is near El Dorado.

The union would exclude from the bargaining unit all production and maintenance employees in the surrounding field, "asserting that their work is so different from that of the plant employees x x x as to render inappropriate a unit comprising both groups."

The NLRB report said: "The employer (Lion) contends that all its employees at Shuler, whether working in the field or the plant, are primarily engaged in the production of oil in an operation so highly integrated that only a unit comprising both groups can be appropriate."

driving and driving without a driver's license.

Wright was one of nine Negroes originally convicted of the rape of two white women aboard a freight train in Alabama in 1931. Eight were sentenced to death in the first trial, but the verdicts were reversed.

After six years of widely publicized litigation, four of the nine were sent to prison, four were freed, and the ninth, Ozie Powell, got 20 years for an assault upon a sheriff's deputy.

A SHAFT of light blinded Gloria as the door from the next room was flung open. "It's I, Mrs. Benoni," Gloria said in a small voice, because now there was nothing to do but brazen it out and knock the Benonis first if she had to. "I'm afraid I'm a little late. But I couldn't help it."

Gloria advanced through the door bravely, clutching her heavy suede bag and the pie box, which was by now somewhat crumpled. "Snooping, huh?" Mr. Benoni stepped forward menacing. "What's the big idea?"

"I just wanted to be sure this was the right place," Gloria murmured, glancing quickly around. It was the same back room where she had seen Mrs. Benoni on that earlier meeting—a kind of sitting room with no windows, lighted by a single, bright electric bulb hanging from the ceiling.

There were several chairs, a couch in the corner, a table with an open vanity case on it and underneath were three suitcases already strapped as if the Benonis were ready to go on a long trip. They even had their hats on, ready for instant flight. Gloria decided, the moment Mr. Benoni knocked her?

"You got the pie in the box?" Mr. Benoni demanded and started toward her. His green hat was tipped onto the back of his head so that the light shone onto the scar, white on his swarthy face and there was an ugly look in his eyes Gloria didn't relish.

The catch on her bag stuck but Gloria got the bag out and pointed it shakily at Mr. Benoni's middle vest button.

"Stop!" she ordered. "Stop right there. I want to talk to you first."

Mr. Benoni stopped so fast he skidded a little and Mrs. Benoni cried, "Why, Mrs. Brown?" "Talk fast," Gloria warned. "I want evidence and then you can have the darn necklace and welcome because if I never see it again, it'll suit me fine. I've got to have evidence to get my husband out of jail. Did you see Lofly kill Jack the Clerk? How did he get my husband's knife?"

"Off my kitchen table," Mrs. Benoni said, eying the pie box in Gloria's left hand. "I saw him. I was in the vestibule when he picked it up with one of my tea towels." Gloria's right forefinger curled suggestively around the trigger of the gun, and Mrs. Benoni made no move toward the pie box. Instead, she added: "He killed Cork and left the body on our dumbwaiter because he—he hated our guts. When a guy gets into the dope racket—"

"Shut up!" Mr. Benoni said rudely.

A leather thing appeared suddenly in his hand and he started toward Gloria. She pulled the trigger of her gun convulsively.

BUT nothing happened. She had forgotten to remove the safety catch like Sammy told her to. She twiddled frantically, but now Mr. Benoni was only a couple of steps away, with the blackjack dangling from his bear-like arm. "I knew it wasn't loaded," he exulted.

Desperately Gloria flung the pie with all her strength straight into his ugly face.

"You—" He spat out a word Gloria had not heard in polite Boston society. He brushed away apples, sugar and pastry, which blinded him for a precious second—almost long enough for Gloria to dart through the door.

Behind her, Mrs. Benoni gave a little cry as the necklace clattered to the door. But Gloria did not linger for a glimpse of its green and gold magnificence. She was almost through the door when Mr. Benoni grabbed her so cruelly she cried out. He lifted the blackjack—he wouldn't just knock her now, Gloria knew. He'd make sure she would never talk again.

DOROTHY DIX Husband Thief

Dear Miss Dix: My husband is 29 years old. Last summer a 17-year-old girl went to work for him and they fell in love with each other. He himself admits that it is probably infatuation on his part. Strangely enough, the girl's mother does all she can to encourage the affair. Ask him to her house all the time. Cook up good things for him to eat. Even went so far as to tell him that if he would take out separation papers he could stay at her house all he wanted to.

My friends think I am crazy not to leave my husband, but I love him more than anything in the world. I realize he has done wrong, but I don't think he is altogether to blame. Don't you think that if I stick to him through this affair, he will love me more than ever after it is over?

DESPERATE WIFE

Answer: You are meeting a dangerous situation with courage and wisdom and if you will just stand to your guns you will win out. Nine women out of ten lose their husbands under similar circumstances.

Holds Trump Card

The wife always has one trump card in her hand. That is her marriage certificate. Her husband can't divorce her as long as she behaves herself, and unless he does. That fact alone should make even a jealous wife think a long time before she goes to the divorce court and so hands her husband over to her rival.

But the point is that you do love him and you can save him, and in the course of time he will get tired of philandering and settle down into the most devoted of husbands and will forget that he ever loved another woman but you. For it is a curious thing that a man can break his wife's heart with his little affairs and still be absolutely faithful to her in his heart.

There are two good reasons for a wife sticking to a philandering husband instead of throwing him overboard as he deserves. The chief one is that she does not secure her happiness by divorcing him if she loves him. The deuces absolutely do not heal the hurt nor fill lonely places in her heart a little of his society than she is and she is less unhappy having a little of his society than she is entirely separated from him.

Dear Dorothy Dix: What do you think of the sarcastic girl who always says something that makes you wish to Heaven you were not in her presence? I mean the kind of girl who, if you pay her a compliment, always intimates that she sees through you and knows you are doing it in order to get some profit for yourself.

Answer: I think the sarcastic girl cuts her throat with her own tongue. Everybody is afraid of her, and she has in particular the worst technique in the world in dealing with men, for they stand in greater dread of her than do of a roaring lion.

There are two kinds of sarcastic girls. One is the girl who has a knack of wisecracking and who thinks she is witty when she says rude things to people. She thinks she makes herself admired by holding people up to ridicule and making them figures of fun for others to scoff at.

The other type of sarcastic girl is one who is socially inept. She doesn't know what to say nor how "Benny!" Mrs. Benoni screamed. "Don't!" Gloria closed her eyes, her senses whirling in a maelstrom of terror, put up her arms instinctively to ward off the blow—but curiously, it didn't fall.

When Gloria lifted her cowering head, he was staring over her head at the doorway beyond, terror slowly congealing his pasty face, while his arm dropped with the blackjack dangling nervelessly.

Gloria twisted about, gave a glad cry. Standing there like the Marines come galloping, galloping to the rescue, was a small gray figure. He would know, Gloria thrilled happily, how to get the safety off the gat he was pointing at Mr. Benoni.

"Lofly!" Mrs. Benoni, agonized, flung herself in front of her husband, begging, "Don't shoot, Lofly. We can explain everything!"

"Mr. Hansen!" Gloria gasped. "Yeah. How yuh, Toots?" He threw her a crooked gray grin, there was a queer sound like a kid's popgun going off. Mrs. Benoni stopped begging the man to listen to her and slid in a sprawling, awkward little heap on the floor.

A HORRIBLE truth dawned on Gloria. Reuben wasn't the terrible Lofly. The man she knew as Hansen was Hansen, the little janitor, the man who called her "Toots," the man she'd promised to give a piece of pie, the man she thought had been protecting her.

"That's for Sal," the little gray man snarled as he glared down at what had been Mrs. Benoni an instant ago. The jewels had fallen from her hand and winked back at him like evil little green eyes.

He leaned over, picked up the necklace and the sneer on his face seemed to Gloria, who was rooted there in horror, to grow and grow until it filled the whole space about him with nauseous venom.

"So you thought you'd turn the heads over to the federal dicks, did you, Benny Boy?" he asked, sliding the necklace into his pocket.

"No!" screamed Mr. Benoni. (To Be Continued)

Dallas, Tex., June 7 —(AP)—Rough and milled rice markets in Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas registered low changes during the first week of June, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture's production and marketing administration.

No sales of rough rice were reported this week, since southern farmers have only small lots left over from seeding. Nominal quotations stand about $1 to $1.50 per barrel during May.

Southern milled rice markets reported less business than in recent weeks. Domestic distributors bought only moderate quantities and were turning more to the low-price medium grains and brokens.

sincerity of a man's love-making She acts as if she believed him.

Dear Miss Dix: About twelve years ago the man who is now my husband was engaged to a very nice girl whom he loved dearly. Through a misunderstanding the engagement was broken and the girl married another man.

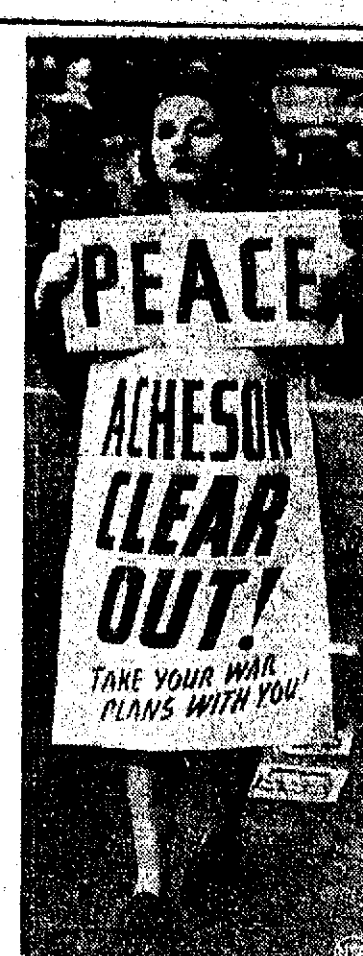

A few years later we were married. Now this other woman has divorced her husband, with whom she was very unhappy. I know she still loves my husband and he loves her, although he is a good husband to me. But I do not really love him and I would be happier away from him.

Now what shall I do? Tell him I would be happier away from him. Now what shall I do? Tell him I know that he is miserable with me and give him a divorce and let him marry the woman he loves, or shall I stumble on wasting the best part of three lives?

A CONSTANT READER Answer: Page Solomon. But my plain and practical light on the subject is that the wise and moral thing to do would be to divorce your husband and thus straighten out the snarl with which Fate has entangled your lives. I see no reason why three people should be miserable keeping up the convention of a marriage that is no real marriage when they might all be happy if it were broken up.

WALKING PAPERS—A woman picket before the Savoy Hotel in London carries signs urging U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson to "clear out." Acheson, in London for "Big Three" talks with British and French foreign ministers, was being honored at a dinner by the Pilgrims Society, an organization for aiding Anglo-American friendship.

Suggests a Committee to Study Aid Plan

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Two Republican senators proposed today that congress set up a commission to study the problem of finding an aid program to carry on after the European recovery program ends.

Senator Saltonstall (R-Mass) and Smith (R-N.J.) made this proposal as Senator M. C. Mahon (D-Conn.) asked for early hearings on a resolution calling for a special session of the United Nations assembly to discuss world-wide disarmament.

Without too much need to either of these proposals, administration leaders continued their speed-up hearings on a bill to authorize a $1,222,500,000 second year for foreign arms program to bulwark non-Communist nations.

Saltonstall and Smith suggested that the president, vice president and house speaker each appoint four persons to a study commission—two each from private life and two from the branch of government they represent.

Saltonstall said in a statement they are proposing "that a commission be set up by act of congress similar in form to that which we all know as the Hoover commission," his commission, on governmental reorganization, was headed by former President Hoover.

It appeared possible, meanwhile, that hearings on the arms aid bill may wind up tomorrow—less than a week after the President's request was received on Capitol Hill.

General George C. Marshall, wartime army chief of staff and former secretary of state, was

Truman in Bid for Aid of Business

Washington, June 7 (AP)—President Truman made a bid for business support of his legislative program when he said last night that federal action in years has been "the salvation of private enterprise."

Pummeling the "reactionaries" as he was still stumping the country, Mr. Truman told the Association of Better Business Bureaus that the alarms over socialism raised by his critics are "futile, worn, false and completely ridiculous."

"Action by government is necessary at times, to make the private enterprise system work," he declared.

"My own belief is that the government is entitled to part of the credit for the good times we are enjoying."

The President urged support for his program of aid to small business, sent to congress a month ago. It calls for "insured loans" to stimulate investment, more liberal federal lending policies, and government advisory services.

"These measures will help our economy to maintain a constant and steady rate of growth," he said. "I very much hope this legislation will pass before congress goes home."

Mr. Truman told the association at its 36th annual meeting dinner that his foes have been "spending great sums of money on a campaign of propaganda" to convince the public that "we are on the last mile that socialism is just ahead."

On the contrary, he said, "our whole economy has been strengthened by the program which government has followed during the last 17 years."

He listed as beneficial factors the government's introduction of loans to business; insurance of bank deposits; regulation of stock markets, old age and unemployment insurance; minimum wages; low-rent housing and other policies.

"Such measures have given stability to the economy, they have broadened the distribution of purchasing power, and they have provided an economic climate in which private enterprise could flourish," he said.

called to appear in support of the arms aid program before the house foreign affairs committee this morning. He goes over to the senate for a closed door session with its foreign relations committee in the afternoon.

U.S. Becoming Reconciled to Trouble

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 7 —(AP)— Like someone who has become used to war, we seem reconciled now to a war and troubled future.

Just look back a bit to see how it was, and how it is with us now.

Right after World War II we had high hopes of peace for a long time, since troublemaking Germany had been taken care of.

The wartime taxes were still with us. We hoped we'd fix it that soon, too.

It seemed sensible to think, after all the bloody killing in the war, we could cut our military forces.

In fact, we did. We reduced them to a fragment. Fast.

But, gradually our relations with Russia turned sour. Country after country was yanked under the Soviet wing.

And the United Nations, that great hope of mankind, became a place for fishwife talk. East and West used it to quarrel with each other.

Two secretaries of state, Byrnes and Marshall, made trips to Europe in the hope of patching up the damage before it became too fierce.

When they returned, it was clear from their reports to us the skies were growing darker, not brighter.

Taxes dropped just a little. But, moved around, we began to build up the armed forces again.

There was an end to hopes for a big cut in taxes. It meant an end, too, to any hope of making a real cut in the national debt.

We were well on our way to making bigger and worse atomic bombs, hoping it would be years before Russia could make even one.

The Marshall plan started. The plan for helping Europe and so help us by staying off communism.

There were screams about how much it cost and would cost until it was to end, or supposed to end, in 1952.

Things got worse, not better. All China, with its 400,000,000 people, was falling to the Communists, communism's greatest prize yet.

Then we entered the Atlantic pact. An agreement among the Western democracies to stick to each other against communism.

There seemed less talk of cutting taxes, a sign the country was getting reconciled to a long struggle with Russia.

And then we entered the arms pact with Western Europe, to back up the Atlantic pact.

There were some screams in congress about this because of the cost — although congress went along — and because for the first time in our peacetime history we were entering a military alliance.

But nothing showed better than the Atlantic pact and the arms pact how far and how fast this country had moved in 10 or 11 years.

We were getting up to our necks in the world now, and we knew it. Meanwhile, we learned the Russians had moved more quickly than our experts thought they would. They had an atomic explosion, sure news they had the atom bomb or soon would have.

This news both chilled and stiffened American thinking. We knew at last how truly important time was, time to get ready for the worst, if it came.

We might still hope the future could be worked out peacefully, but we knew now we couldn't depend on hope alone. If we wanted peace we had to get ready for war to make peace possible — maybe.

All this — The constant piling up of new steps in the struggle with Russia, off widening responsibilities, of new sacrifices — made Americans used to the idea that the future might be dark for a long time.

I meant we were going to continue to spend money, a lot of it.

And gradually we grew closer to Europe in our thinking. Maybe that is why in the past few weeks Americans never seemed to bat an eye when — The United Nations talked of helping Europe economically when the Marshall plan ends in 1952 and when President Truman talked of huge, new spending on arms for us and Europe.

And maybe it explains why no one seemed to get excited when we learned that more than 50 members of congress, including at least 25 senators, support the idea of talking over a federal union with Europe.

Desperado and Wife Captured

Charlotte, N. C., June 6 (AP)—A former convict and his red-haired wife who led law enforcement officers on a five-day chase in four states were captured while asleep early today.

Charles W. Brown, special agent in charge of the Charlotte FBI office, said the couple — Carl Baskin Hensley and Martha Louise Hill Hensley — were collared in the home of an acquaintance near Cowpens, S. C.

The Hensleys, who had shot it out with Tennessee and Georgia highway patrolmen and had blasted roadblocks set up to halt them, were nabbed before they could rise from a bed, Brown said.

The couple escaped from officers early yesterday in Spartanburg, S. C., where they live, when a third man believed associated with them was taken into custody. Edward Clyde McAllister, 34-year-old former convict of Huntsville, Ala., was driving a truck behind a car occupied by the Hensleys when he was captured in Spartanburg.

The Hensleys sped away and were believed at one time to be headed through North Carolina and toward Tennessee. Cowpens is only a short distance from the North Carolina line.

McAllister denied he was one of the three persons whose gunfire brushes with the law had alerted constabulary throughout the southeast. Their first escapade came when they opened fire on Lieut. Dainy Garland of the Tennessee highway patrol after he stopped them for a routine check near Chattanooga Thursday.

During the exchange of gunfire with Garland, the three stole the patrolman's car equipped with a machine gun and 500 rounds of ammunition.

Subsequently the trio zig-zagged through the wild north Georgia hill country and then northward, leaving a trail of stolen cars. Brown declined to name the acquaintance in whose home the Hensleys were captured. He said the machine gun and ammunition were recovered.

The Hensleys were taken to the Spartanburg jail. Hensley is 34; and his scar-faced wife about 33. The FBI said Hensley and McAllister were released two months ago from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta where they served time for transporting stolen automobiles across state lines.

Mrs. Hensley, the FBI said, is on two-years probation ending in October for the same offense.

Upwards of a thousand different type radio receiving tubes have been developed, most of which can still be purchased.

Voters Give Support to Hickenlooper

Des Moines, June 6 — (AP)— Iowa Republicans gave investigating Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper whooping support in yesterday's primary election. Democrats endorsed the administration Brannan farm plan with less emphasis. Hickenlooper so far out-distanced his principal opponent for renomination to a second term that Earl F. Wisdom, Des Moines attorney, conceded defeat at the half-way point in a tabulation of the states' 2474 precincts. His plurality was 127,000 with about 350 precincts unreported.

The senator submitted his candidacy largely on his record. He sparked the investigation of the atomic energy commission and aggressively supported the charge of Senator Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis) that Communists infest the state department.

Wisdom countered that Hickenlooper raised undue fears as to atomic bombs and Communists.

The first statewide test of the Brannan farm plan, notable because Iowa is a prime producer of the world's food, came in the race for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Albert J. Loveland, former U.S. undersecretary of agriculture, quit his $17,500 a year job early this year and went all out for the program advanced by his former boss, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan.

He was running well ahead of former Governor Nelson G. Kras-chel, who bitterly opposed the plan. Kraschel branded the program "one man's dream, unsafe for farmers, and a delusion for consumers." He suggested a bi-partisan board to formulate and administer a farm-aid program based on that of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Third in the six-man race was Otha D. Wearin, former congressman. He contended the kind of a farm program Iowa Democrats support should be determined by the party's post-primary state convention. President Roosevelt endorsed Wearin in an unsuccessful attempt to purge Senator Guy M. Gillette in the 1938 Democratic senatorial primary. The other aspirants were hopelessly outclassed.

Loveland led Kraschel by about 7,000 votes as the tabulation neared the finish. Wearin was far behind.

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

Describes Search for Survivors

Editors note:
United Press Staff Correspondent R. T. Eskew flew a 10-hour mission in a coast guard PBV searching for tiny specks in the ocean that might be men. His story:

By R. T. ESKEW

Aboard Coast Guard PBV 48372, June 6 —(UP)— Twelve life rafts. Ten huddled together and clotted with people so small they look unreal. No one moves.

That was the way he first saw the 37 men so far lifted from the choppy sea.

Sprawled in one raft is a lone man. He looks dead. In another, there is no one. The rest of the survivors have clustered together in 10 rafts.

There probably will not be any more survivors, we think. The day is not right for the eye-torturing job of scanning every wave for a face or yellow life jacket. It is gain easy access to your dressing room? There has been countless arguments and misunderstandings over this in the past.

To the public this may sound trivial but the underlying factor is: Shall the football fan, who pays the freight for football as a paying business, get the real facts and the information about his football team or shall he read only cut and dried statements which give him no news and nothing of color and the human interest?

murky and clouds scud low over the water.

We were in another section of the search area when the tense message, "survivors sighted; dropping rafts," crackled over the radio.

The coast guard has sectioned up the search area like a football field. There's a 50-yard line which we can't cross because of the danger of air collision with other planes.

But with the message, Lt. Charles E. MacDowell digs a wing toward the ocean and we turn, the lumbering PBV screaming in every rivet.

All night, since we took off in the twin-engined plane at 11:30, the sky has been alternately squally and obscured with misty clouds.

Now, with the first faint light of pre-dawn we head full throttle for the place where the lucky 37 are floating.

The first thing we see is a navy Privateer, low on the water and circling tight. We're down to 400 feet and can see ocean grass. But no sign of the life rafts we are looking for.

HM-1st Jim Turney in the blister turret sees it first and now we're almost on them. Three smoke flares with their plumes forced low on the water by a stiff wind. Then the gaudy sea-dye, staining the blue ocean green.

By diving to about 200 feet we can see fairly good.

Not a man in a raft waves. Not a head is lifted.

A B-17 with a big power-boast fastened under its nose is circling behind us. We are following the Privateer, then a PBM joins the flight.

We can't land for the water would rip the hull out of our ship. We picked up a message that a

Liquor Runner Arrested in First Attempt

Ashtown, June 6 —(AP)— Missouri man's first attempt at liquor running ended sadly for him early today.

Martin K. Houston, 35, of St. Louis, paid fines of $225 before Judge C. N. Cook at 3 a. m., and had 27 cases of bonded whiskey confiscated. He pleaded guilty to transporting untaxed liquor, bringing liquor into dry territory and having fictitious license plates in his car.

State Trooper Arthur (Buck) Halsell said he arrested Houston near Ogden, Ark., after a 10-mile chase that started in Texarkana. He said that several times the heavy coupe swerved in an attempt to knock him off the road, but that in Ogden, it raced up a dead-end street and plunged off an embankment into a dry lake bed.

Halsell said he took up the chase on foot when Houston fled, and overtook him some distance away.

Judge Cook said Houston told him it was his first attempt at running liquor from Louisiana into dry Oklahoma.
